DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The WILSON HOUSE is a two and one-half storey stone house dating from ca. 1918. Its style is a blend of the Colonial and Romanesque revivals. The entrance facade is the south; its second storey is expressed as seven bays and frame gables in the steep roof are above two bays at either end. The wall does not project beneath these gables, however, and in the first storey under the west gable a triple window is beneath a broad segmental arch while there are three separate windows under the east gable in the first storey. A one-storey shed-roofed porch with massive stone columns shelters the first storey of the three middle bays and a broad chimney rises through the porch roof on the south face of the house east of the middle bay. A shed dormer with triple casements is in the roof west of the chimney. Typical windows are 8/8 with louvred blinds.

The west gable of the north facade extends to form a short wing and the main roof falls to a low eave beside it at its intersection with the main block to form a picturesque re-entrant corner.

A wide center hall is flanked by a large living room on the west, kitchen on the east and a dining room centered at the north facade. An open stair to the second floor has a moulded rail supported by three rectangular balusters per tread. The rail terminates in a scroll and applied scrolls ornament each step end. Interior trim, generally, recalls the Colonial revival with Adamesque-revival Ionic mantels in the living room and dining room and architrave trim. Formerly the living room had a massive stone fireplace in the picturesque style of the exterior.
